

SHORT COMMUNICATION

The Development of an Interclerkship Curriculum on Methamphetamine Abuse and Dependence

Kathryn N. Huggett^{1*}, Ph.D., Eugene J. Barone², M.D., Amanda S. Lofgreen¹, M.S., William B. Jeffries³, Ph.D.

¹Office of Medical Education
Creighton University School of Medicine
2500 California Plaza
Omaha, NE 68178

²Department of Family Medicine

³Office of Medical Education
University of Vermont College of Medicine
The Courtyard at Given, N117
89 Beaumont Avenue
Burlington, VT 05405
USA

* Corresponding author

Keywords: Curriculum, Medical Student, Substance Abuse Education, Methamphetamine Abuse
Education, Interclerkship

Phone: (+) 1-402-280-2826

Fax: (+)1-402-280-2046

Email: KathrynHuggett@creighton.edu

ABSTRACT

Methamphetamine abuse is a significant medical problem in our region. We developed and investigated an interclerkship curriculum to educate medical students about the significance of methamphetamine abuse and dependence and its effects on the individual and society. Topics covered include neuropathology, neuropharmacology, diagnosis, treatment, law enforcement issues and social services.
